Financial Courseware Currently under Development

AASIS Support Center Financial staff is currently working to revise existing and develop new courseware for all AASIS Financial Modules.   We are restructuring the course listing to incorporate multiple levels of training within each area. Our goal is to offer an informative instructional training tool to end users that provides an overall understanding of the integration within AASIS as well as specific business process instructions for all areas of operations.

Due to the extensive changes being made to the courseware, time is needed to develop, review, and edit the material for each course. This is occurring as quickly as possible.

ASC Financial staff understands the importance of training and is working hard to provide end users with an exceptional training experience within a reasonable timeframe. Please be patient with us as we undertake this important project. We anticipate offering some of the revised courses prior to our fiscal year end.

Please continue to request attendance for the current classes via the waiting list on the AASIS website in order for us to determine the areas of greatest needed. In the event one area has a greater demand, we may adjust the plan to accommodate this need.

Existing materials are still available on the AASIS website and can be downloaded for end user to use as a reference. Please note, however, that this material will not be the material used when new courses are posted to the training schedule and offered to end users.
